

What types are you?

1. Rate each e-learning type by level of relevance (Low, Medium or High) to your organisation.
2. Note how the types you have rated as High Relevance would suit your business goals and learner or client needs.

e-learning Format	What is it?	Relevance (L/M/H)	Why use it? What benefits can it provide for your organisation?
e-learning Modules 	Self-paced self-directed courses usually for workforce development.
Online systems training 	Self-paced self-directed courses for learning computer systems and applications.
Blended learning 	Self-paced e-learning modules for individual study plus conventional instructor-led face-to-face sessions: the “flipped” classroom.
Facilitated online learning 	Instructor-led courses delivered through a course website using collaborative tools.

e-learning Format	What is it?	Relevance (L/M/H)	Why use it? What benefits can it provide for your organisation?
Virtual classrooms 	Live (“synchronous”) distance delivery using web conferencing tools.
Webinars 	“Live” online lecture-style presentations using web conferencing tools.
Web in class 	Enhanced face-to-face group delivery using online and computer-based tools in an individual course or classroom.

e-learning Format	What is it?	Relevance (L/M/H)	Why use it? What benefits can it provide for your organisation?
Web conferencing 	Conducting meetings at a distance over the Internet.
Knowledge sharing 	Supported self-directed professional learning using web-based tools and networks.
Performance management 	Online systems which provide individual and group profiles for staff for planning and monitoring training and performance.

e-learning Format	What is it?	Relevance (L/M/H)	Why use it? What benefits can it provide for your organisation?
Performance support 	Online guides, templates, references and job aids to assist with work or learning tasks, with mobile access and often customised apps (e.g. a GPS).
Virtual worlds and simulations 	“Immersive” web environments, with or without a trainer/teacher.
MOOCS (massive open online courses) 	Free, open entry online short courses for an unlimited number of learners from anywhere.		